AGGRESSOR IS CHEERED

Hostility of Public Toward the Militants Grows — Sylvia
Threatens Assault.

[By Cable to The Tribune.]
London, June 7.—By entering Buckingham Palace and wandering about inside apparently wherever he chose, even to the door of the Queen's apartment, without let or hindrance, a young man, perhaps a practical joker of the most audacious kind, has created a profound sensation here.

The young man gave his name as Harry Pike and said he is an engineer. He declared he entered the palace merely to show that it could easily be done. He was arrested and held without bail, as it is believed he was acting as an agent of the suffragettes.

The King and Queen were in the palace at the time, sleeping in their apartments. The incident, coming so soon after the threats to kidnap Prince Henry, is calculated to inspire every fear that even the safety of a royal residence cannot now be relied on, since its sanctity has been so easily violated.

King George Angry.
King George, who does not usually mince matters when he is angry, showed that he was intensely annoyed. The court authorities, already panic-stricken, as well as distressed at having their elaborate system of protection held up to ridicule and contempt, are, it is understood, being made to feel the royal indignation.

Pike related at great length the story of his adventures in the royal residence. He showed that he was greatly amused at it, and though he is charged with "being on inclosed premises for unlawful purposes," it would certainly seem from his narration that he had no criminal intent, but acted out of sheer bravado of the police, the sentries and the palace authorities.

The intruder did, however, commit one undoubted crime in the palace. He stole a suit of clothes. This, however, only makes his adventure the more sensational and amusing, for such was the leisure he enjoyed inside the palace that he changed the stolen suit for the clothes he was wearing and left his own behind in exchange.

Awakens a Sleeper.
Another astounding incident of the young man's wanderings in the royal palace is that he actually went into a room where a servant was sleeping, and, on finding he had awakened the sleeper, managed to get out merely by saying, "Oh, excuse me, I am looking for No. 20." It was only on his entering the bedroom of one Copple, one of the Queen's pages, who was awake, that his capture came about.

Pike says he got into the palace gardens by scaling the brick wall bounding the royal grounds along the fashionable thoroughfare, Grosvenor Place. It is this part of his story which makes him suspected of being connected with the suffragettes, for it was over this wall that the militants were expected

RICHARDS FLEES FIRE

Banking Superintendent and Family Routed at Early Blaze.

Fire at the home of Eugene Lamb Richards, State Superintendent of Banks, at 245 Prospect av., New Brighton, early yesterday, caused damage estimated at $45,000. Members of the family and guests barely escaped with their lives. Mr. Richards, his wife, two children, two maids, and Colonel and Mrs. William Denny, of Washington, rushed to the street in their night garments. Mr. Richards was slightly burned.

The fire was discovered in the dumb waiter, on the second floor, by Mr. Richards, who investigated when awakened by smoke. The fire is believed to have been caused by a badly insulated electric wire.

The Richards home was one of the show places of Staten Island.

Ironmaster May Give Cummins
New Start in Life.

William J. Cummins, sent to Sing Sing for wrecking the Carnegie Trust Company, according to news that came from the prison yesterday, is corresponding from there with Andrew Carnegie.

Keepers say Cummins has sent a number of letters to Carnegie. Something has suddenly increased Cummins' hopes and made him feel much more cheerful the last few days. Prison officers say they are informed that the former banker has been led to believe that when he gets out of prison Mr. Carnegie will give him a new start in life.

GIVES FOURTH OF HIS BLOOD FOR A FRIEND

One New Haven Physician Makes Sacrifice for Another in Transfusion Case.

[By Telegram to The Tribune.]
New Haven, June 7.—A remarkable operation of blood transfusion was performed here to-day in an attempt to save the life of Otto G. Ramsay, professor of gynecology at the Yale Medical School and an obstetrician of international fame. Dr. B. H. Moore, a physician at the New Haven General Hospital and a Yale graduate, offered his blood, and a quarter of the entire amount in his circulatory system was infused into the veins of Dr. Ramsay.

Late to-night it was stated that the condition of Dr. Ramsay was improved, but that it was not yet possible definitely to forecast his recovery. Dr. Moore was reported very weak following his large loss of blood.

Dr. Ramsay was attacked by bronchitis two weeks ago, his illness turning to pneumonia last week and assuming a critical stage yesterday, when it was said that only blood transfusion could possibly save his life.

Several Yale seniors, members of the classes of Dr. Ramsay, volunteered to make the sacrifice, but it was decided to accept the offer of Dr. Moore to-day. Dr. Lindermann, of New York City, directed the operation, assisted by Dr. Wilder Tileston, of the Yale Medical School.

Dr. Ramsay is forty-five years old. He came to Yale from Johns Hopkins University about twelve years ago.

SEES HER GOWN PASS BY

Recognizes It from Porch—It Goes to Police Station.

Mrs. Clarence Turner and her husband, who is a jockey and rides for John E. Madden, were sitting on the porch of their bungalow at Brighton Beach last night when Mrs. Turner suddenly exclaimed:

"There goes my lavender gown, the one that was stolen when our trunks disappeared."

Later Mrs. Ethel Schwartz, of 33 West 65th st., was arrested and brought to the Tenderloin station. To that station was reported several days ago the loss of the Turners' trunk, which had been shipped from the Hotel Normandie.

The prisoner, held on a technical grand larceny charge, says she bought the gown. It was offered to her at a low price, she said, and she bought it because she recognized its value and knew she was getting a bargain.

WOMAN FIGHTS SNAKES

Holds Off Two Large Copper-heads Till Help Comes.

Newton, N. J., June 7.—On a walk this afternoon Mrs. Grace Cole, wife of a physician, was approaching a small stream at Hunt's Park, three miles from here, when two large copperheads poked snakes slipped from a group of bushes and headed for her.

It is said snakes will not attack unless attacked or disturbed, but Mrs. Cole was not certain whether that story was well authenticated, so she picked up a small club and struck at the snakes.

She worked her arm so energetically the reptiles could not get close to her, but she was becoming exhausted when several young men, who had heard her cries, came on the run and killed the snakes.

STRIKING CADDIES IN RIOT ON LINKS

Use Golf Sticks on Strike

Tournament.

FAT PLAYER LOSES BALL IN MOB RUSH

Deputy Sheriffs Rout Fighters with Nightsticks, and the Game Goes On.

Members of the New Siwanoy Golf Club played over their links in East Chester yesterday under guard of deputy sheriffs and police, following a spectacular encounter between striking caddies and substitutes hired to take their places.

The tournament for the Bamberger Trophy had just started, when one hundred caddies went on strike because the club would not raise the regular fee of 50 cents for eighteen holes to 75 cents. When efforts were made to fill their places and play the matches the strikers rushed on the course with golf sticks and other weapons, pummeled the "scabs," stole the balls and otherwise made it impossible to play good golf.

The first members over the course in the afternoon called to their favorite caddies to take the bags and start out. "But before we start," each boy said to his prospective employer, "I want to tell you we have raised our rates. We won't work from now on for less than 75 cents a round."

In each case the demand for the increased rate was refused, and another caddy called. The second caddy, however, always insisted on the higher rate.

This situation quickly drew the players into conference to decide on action. Some of the members said it was too trifling a matter to necessitate consideration, and declared they'd carry their own set of sticks. The majority, however, insisted that caddies must be had, but that first the striking boys would have to be discharged for good. That was easily done, and with as little difficulty other boys were engaged for the work.

William A. Patterson, who won the cup, started off with his new caddy. That is precisely where the trouble started. The strikebreakers were not permitted to get more than a few yards from the first tee. They were punched and pummeled with such enthusiasm that they quickly withdrew, dropping clubs and bags.

The players were called vile names, and some of the women became so frightened that they ran to the clubhouse for protection. When a fat player came puffing along toward the fifth hole and tried to hit a ball with his brassie, which was the only stick he had left, one of the strikers shouted, "Don't let the guy get the ball!" In a jiffy half a dozen caddies were after the ball, and it was soon out of sight. The mob started to make a football rush for several members, and then James D. Connor, Police Commissioner of Mount Vernon, sent for help.

The club is outside the jurisdiction of Mount Vernon, Bronxville and Tuckahoe police, and as they were powerless to act, Sheriff Doyle, of White Plains, sent Under Sheriff Wiesendanger and ten deputies, with night sticks, to the links. Captain Scanlon, with a force of East Chester town police, also appeared on the scene. The rioters were driven from the course after they had been threatened with arrest.

Later on, most of the strikers, except the ringleaders, went back to work and the tournament was finished, while a guard of town police patrolled the course.

PEPITO AS DOVE OF PEACE WELCOMES BRYAN GUESTS

Diplomats at Garden Party, Startled by Raucous Greetings and Farewells from Unknown Corner, Find Family
Parrot Asserting His Special Prerogative.

[From The Tribune Bureau.]

Washington, June 7.—Diplomats and the thousand odd guests who greeted the thousand-odd guests who greeted White House bride at the garden party given in their honor yesterday afternoon by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan were mystified to hear their welcome repeated in shrill but not discordant tones. When taking their departure the parting salute of "Good-by; God bless you," or "Good-by; come again," issued lustily from some unknown quarter, sped them on their way.

Visitors, startled, looked about in wonder. Many wondered if it was the celebrated dove of peace.

No; it was Pepito, the pet parrot of the Secretary of State, helping to receive and entertain the guests. Had not so much interest centered about the Commoner and his wife and the Secretary of the Treasury and his bride, Pepito might have made a speech which would have held the assemblage spellbound.

Pepito, a privileged member of the Bryan household, has come to learn many of the family characteristics. Between Pepito and the Secretary of State there exists the utmost familiarity and friendship.

7 CHILDREN SLAIN IN ACCIDENTS OF DAY

Boy Killed by Sprint at Ball Game
—Man Who Rocks Boat Adds
His Mite to Woe.

Racing south in Lenox av. shortly before midnight last night, William W. Hobbs, a negro chauffeur for Frank M. Stanton, of Shore Road, Whitestone, Long Island, ran down and killed a woman at 119th st. and narrowly missed a patrolman who tried to capture him. Only a slight accident to his machine, according to the police, brought him to a halt and prevented his escape. He is held on a charge of homicide.

Patrolman Henne, of the West 128th st. station, was on fixed post at 118th st. when he saw the lights of an automobile coming down the avenue at what appeared to him to be a 25-mile rate of speed. At the same time he saw a woman standing at 119th st. waiting for a car and apparently ignorant of her peril.

As Henne ran to warn her the car struck her a terrific blow, smashing one of its lights. Two wheels ran over her body. Henne lifted his club to signal the chauffeur to stop, when the machine swerved and narrowly missed him.

Turning about, Henne rapped on the pavement for help, when suddenly the car's mechanism broke and Hobbs was forced to bring it to a stop.

While he was being taken to the station another automobile was pressed into service and the body of his victim was rushed to the Harlem Hospital. She was dressed in expensive clothing and had several pieces of valuable jewelry. A watch set with a ruby and seven diamonds may prove a clew to her identity. It is an Elgin No. 1,079, 580. Her umbrella had a gold handle and pearls were set in it.

There were two cards in her bag. One was that of Dr. August Ohiendorf, of 100 West 97th street, and the other that of Louis Green, a hardware merchant, of 942 Columbus avenue. On the back of the green card was written in lead pencil the name of Julius Tolme, of 55 Barclay street.

Seven children, ranging in age from seventeen years to thirteen months, lost their lives in various accidents in and around New York yesterday, and an eighth was injured, perhaps fatally. Drowning cost one life, two fell from the roofs of buildings and were killed, two died in automobile accidents and still another was run over by a streetcar. A third automobile accident fatally injured a child.

Mrs. Winder saw a crowd yesterday afternoon collecting in front of her home, at 1236 Third av., and rushed over to see what was the trouble. She found her son George, fourteen years old, lying unconscious on the pavement. He had fallen from the roof of the building after being seized by a fit of apoplexy. The mother carried the boy in her arms to the Reception Hospital, where he died an hour later.

Almost at the same time John Jablonski, three years old, fell from a front window of his home, on the third floor of 88 Murray st., and was killed. Mrs. Annie Hengel, of 121 Kent av., Williamsburg, went to the window of her apartment to see if she could find any sign of a breeze. On glancing upward she saw the body of a little child hurtling through the air. Instinctively she stretched out her arms, and miraculously Mary Runglin, three years old, fell into them and stuck. The child had been

MEXICANS NOTIFIED U. S. WILL PREVENT BLOCKADE

By GEORGE GRISWOLD HILL.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 7.—The American delegates to the mediation conference informed the Mexican delegates to-night that the United States had decided to maintain Tampico as an open port.

Mr. Lehmann expressed the opinion that this step would not cause any difficulty with the Mexicans.

The Mexicans would not comment on the information, although it is known that they feel that the decision is a violation of the armistice.

There will be a full meeting of the conference on Tuesday, at which, it is assumed, the Mexican delegates will make vigorous representations regarding any interference with Huerta's design to blockade Tampico.

"MAGGIE YEOMAN" FIGHTS FOR CHILD

Nobleman's Daughter Wins
Order Setting Aside
Annulment.

"Maggie Yeoman," daughter of an English nobleman and the plaything of fate from birth, who was, was not and now is Mrs. Marguerite Y. Hart, told the story of her life last week to Justice Blanchard, of the Supreme Court, to whom she appealed to set aside a decree of annulment of her marriage to Edgar J. M. Hart, an instructor at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Justice Blanchard issued an order setting aside the annulment decree and requiring her husband to bring his action to trial again.

Involved in the story of "Maggie Yeoman" is, according to the affidavits, Miss Eliza Frederic, formerly of the B. F. Keith Harlem Opera Stock Company. After Hart had obtained an annulment of his marriage to Miss Yeoman on the ground of her insanity he met and fell in love with Miss Frederic. For a year and a half they have been engaged, as both have sworn. "Anything which prevents this proposed marriage will entail irreparable injury to Miss Frederic," stated Hart in an affidavit, "and will greatly affect my own peace of mind."

Miss Yeoman married Hart after a courtship lasting four years. Besides declaring his wife was insane when she married him, Hart, in opposing her motion, asserted that she was insane all the time he courted her, and that Julius Mahr, her foster brother, in his efforts to get rid of a lunatic "was attempting to hound him out of New York."

To Establish Noble Parentage.

A child was born to the couple within a year after their marriage. It is for this child's sake mainly that "Maggie Yeoman" has fought for so many years. She further declares that when the case comes to trial she will establish her own parentage by proving that her father, an English lord, married her mother, a well known dancer. Stripped of its legal phraseology, the woman's history is this:

She was brought to this country as a foundling when a child. Here she was put in the St. Elizabeth Home for Girls. A Mrs. Sterling, fascinated by her vivacity and dainty prettiness, adopted her. In the latter's home she met Hart and he fell in love with her.

The girl, however, rejected his attentions for several years. Rebuffs increased his ardor, and after a courtship lasting four years he married her. This was in 1906. The following year their child was born, and the year after that Hart, saying she was insane and had threatened to kill Mrs. Sterling, deserted her, and she was committed to the Bloomingdale Asylum for the Insane.

Hart then sued to have their marriage annulled, alleging that his wife was insane when they were married. Mrs. Hart was in no condition to defend the suit; undefended it went to trial, and the marriage was declared annulled.

Alienists Pronounce Her Sane.

Then began her long fight; a fight first for her own freedom and then to have set aside the annulment decree. Eminent alienists have passed on her condition. While there seems much doubt as to when she became insane, they agreed in the main that she had fully recovered her sanity, and ten months ago she was discharged from the asylum.

Abandoned, without funds and almost without friends, she set about her second fight undisciplined. She found in Mr. Mahr, her foster brother, a warm supporter. She told her counsel that her temporary insanity was caused by the brutal treatment she had received during the brief time she lived with her husband and by worry.

Hart, deeply engaged in his love affair with Miss Frederic, engaged counsel and fought bitterly every move his abandoned wife made. Miss Frederic herself made an affidavit, in which she told of her attachment to Hart and the son born of his marriage to "Maggie Yeoman."

Dr. Bernard Sacks and Dr. Clarence C. Howard have both examined Mrs. Hart since her release from Bloomingdale. Both declared her normal and said they could find nothing in the record of her case to prove that she was insane before 1908, two years after her marriage.

Justice Blanchard, in setting aside the decree, said that Mrs. Hart was entitled to a hearing in court.

CARRANZA'S REPLY TO OPEN A B C DOOR

Rebel Agents Say Chief Will Consent to Everything but Armistice.

[From The Tribune Bureau.]
Washington, June 7.—The reply of the Constitutionalists to the last invitation of the A B C mediators to participate in the conference will be sent to Niagara Falls to-morrow, and the Constitutional agents most familiar with the situation expressed a belief to-night that the mediators would be well enough satisfied with the reply from General Carranza to permit the participation of a rebel delegate.

It is said that Carranza will refuse to accept an armistice, but the reply which he will make concerning the discussion of internal questions will be of such a conciliatory nature as to make it possible for the mediators to permit Constitutional participation.

Carranza will agree to a discussion of internal phases of Mexico's troubles in so far as they are affected by the international aspect of the case, although he still held out against the settlement of the purely internal problems, like the land question, by outsiders.

He is willing to take up Mexico's external relations and discuss the occupation of Vera Cruz, the Tampico incident, the relations of the United States and Mexico and kindred problems. He will only "discuss," however, and refuses to be bound in advance to anything. His delegates will be there to report to him what proposals are made and Carranza will decide whether or not they are acceptable.

TAMPICO BLOCKADED SAYS WAR MINISTER

General Blanquet Tells of Other Alleged Activities of Huerta Troops.

[By Cable to The Tribune.]
Mexico City, June 7.—The War Minister, General Blanquet, was asked this evening whether it was true that the 89th Infantry, which left this city hastily last night, had gone to disperse a band of Zapatistas who approached Chalco, a town in the State of Mexico a short distance from the capital. The minister said the 89th had gone on a quite different mission.

Minister Blanquet was again asked about the landing of arms and ammunition at Tampico for the rebels. While declining to make any comment, he said that the blockade had been established.

The minister declared that General Joaquin Maas, not content with placing San Luis Potosi in a state of defence, was assuming the offensive.

General Blanquet said he was without news of measures reported taken by the rebels to repair the railroad line south of Saltillo, with a view to advancing toward San Luis Potosi, or of the rumors that troops of the Guaymas garrison had been placed on merchant vessels as preliminary to their departure. He added that a strong Federal column had been sent from Guadalajara to disperse rebel bands in the neighborhood of Sayula and re-establish rail communication between Guadalajara and Colima.

General Huerta spent a quiet Sunday at home. Toward evening he drove in an automobile with his aids in San Francisco st.

The Minister of the Interior, Senor Alcocer, said to-night that rail communication between Mexico City and Guadalajara had been re-established.

BEE FLIES DOWN THROAT

Way to Farmer's Stomach.

[By Telegram to The Tribune.]
Boulder, Col., June 7.—While trying to capture a swarm of bees which had alighted on his premises, John Andrews, a farmer living a few miles east of here, was badly injured when one of the insects flew down his throat, stinging its way to his stomach. Andrews was unable to control the muscles of his throat on account of the pain and assisted the bee's ingress by swallowing it.

Andrews's physician says he is suffering acute pains and may die from blood poisoning. At the time of the accident Andrews's head and neck were incased in mosquito bar.

CONSTITUTIONALISTS ELATED OVER NEWS

Carranza's Reply Said to Mean
Rebel Participation in Peace Conference.

[From The Tribune Bureau.]
Washington, June 7.—It is the present intention of the United States government to keep Tampico an open port for "all commerce," and if the Huerta gunboats, the Bravo and the Zaragoza, which are due at Tampico at 5 o'clock to-morrow morning, try to establish a blockade to keep supplies from the Constitutionalists to use the American navy to prevent them.

There is, however, a chance that the orders which the American naval commanders have to keep Tampico open may be altered, in view of the danger of a collapse of the mediation at Niagara Falls which may follow the use or threat of force against the Mexican gunboats.

Constitutionalists who heard to-night that the United States had given formal notification that Tampico would be kept an open port were elated. They made less effort after learning of this official decision to conceal the fact that the Constitutionalists really needed ammunition and that if Huerta had established an effective blockade the situation for them would have been serious. Now they say there is nothing that stands in the way of a speedy advance upon Mexico City.

The condition is inexplicable to observers of the situation in Washington. The Secretary of State has time and again stated that there exists between the United States and Huerta an agreement that no aggressive action shall be taken by either side pending the mediation. He has also said that there is nothing in the agreement of Huerta with the mediators that makes it impossible for the dictator to make war on the Constitutionalists.

Anomalous Situation.
Yet it appears clear that the American navy is to be utilized in preventing the blockade which Huerta proposes to establish to keep his enemies from obtaining arms and ammunition. No explanation of the anomalous situation has come from the administration.

It is apparent that the administration is much concerned and that the possibility of a break-up of the mediation is discerned. It is feared in some quarters that Huerta might justify withdrawal from the conferences at Niagara on account of American action against his ships.

The first official explanation of the present situation was obtained to-night from Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, to whom certain questions were put concerning the general situation and concerning certain reports that were published to-day, among them one that American ships would convey the ship Antilla with its cargo of ammunition safely into Tampico.

No New Orders to Badger.

Mr. Daniels's statement follows: "The Navy Department has issued no new orders to Admiral Badger since the Mexican gunboats were reported to be leaving Puerto Mexico. The department has at no time contemplated furnishing a convoy for the Antilla or any other ship, nor have orders to that effect been issued. No word whatever has been received as to whether or not the warships of other nations have been notified of the blockade of Tampico or what their attitude would be toward such a blockade.

"There has been no change in the policy of the government in reference to its desire that the port of Tampico shall be open to all commerce."

The last sentence is regarded as the most significant of all. Mr. Daniels says "all commerce," and this is taken to include the Antilla, with her three million rounds of ammunition, two military aeroplanes and other war supplies. This view is borne out by the instructions which are said to have been sent to Admiral Badger in May to notify the commanders of the Mexican gunboats, which were then just leaving Tampico after the town had been captured by the rebels, that in case they returned to Tampico the United States
